The media brand of automation for cross-media communication!

360°

For 25 years, the monthly automation magazine "Computer&Automation" has been a companion to the growing interconnectivity in the manufacturing and process industries, providing in-depth coverage of the convergence of IT and OT (Operational Technology).

The traditional topics encompassed by the automation pyramid, such as control technology, sensor technology, drive technology, and networking, have now expanded to include emerging trends like Industry 4.0, Industrial IoT, sustainability, human-robot cooperation, safety & security, machine learning, and data analytics. Additionally, the magazine explores interoperability and real-time Ethernet (TSN), as well as IT technologies like edge & cloud computing.

The publication presents the added value and benefits of these technologies in a neutral, sophisticated, and independent manner through user-oriented specialist articles. Reporting also includes insights into product innovations, market trends, and analyses.

The interactive e-paper editions of the monthly print magazine, enriched with videos, GIF animations, links to additional information, and podcasts, provide an enhanced reader experience.

For 25 years, the monthly automation magazine Computer&Automation has accompanied the increasing networking in the manufacturing and process industry and has been reporting in-depth on the fusion of IT and OT (Operational Technology).

High contact opportunity for advertising

Many advertisers already appreciate the digital counterpart to our print editions. And rightly so, as a study by BDZV and ZMG showed last year. A total of 10,983 readers of newspaper adverts were surveyed for the study and the advertising impact of printed and digital adverts was analysed and compared.

After dividing the target group into readers of printed editions only, readers with contact to the e-paper edition only and combined users who have read both variants. Both variants are used intensively: 92 per cent of print readers state that they have read at least half of all pages. The same applies to 89 per cent of e-paper readers and 95 per cent of combination readers.
